

The Benefits of Being an AWAI Member

By Katie Yeakle

Yesterday I gave you my take on why becoming a copywriter is the best path to living the writer's life. (And, I should know ... I've seen it happen for AWAI members every day for the last 19 years!)

And, by choosing AWAI as your writing coach and partner, you're that much closer to fulfilling your dream of living the writer's life. That's because as an AWAI member, you're entitled to a long list of additional perks and benefits ... many of which you may not even realize you're eligible to receive.

So today I'm going to go through them so that you can take full advantage.

But first, meet Richard Armstrong.

Richard is one of the nation's leading freelance direct-mail copywriters. He's been living the writer's life for over 30 years now ... and loving every minute of it.

Katie Yeakle

Living the writer's life comes in many forms

Some people I talk with have this impression that to be a successful copywriter, you have to get up at the crack of dawn and start writing. Or they've heard tales of working 14 hours a day tied to their keyboards.

While it's true that some writers are "early to risers" and others like to work long hours, the good news is you don't have to do any of that to be successful.

Don't get me wrong — if you can do those things, you'll never lack for work or money.

But my recent interview with Richard Armstrong for the Professional Writers' Alliance reinforced what we've been saying for a long time now here at AWAI — the writer's life comes in many different forms.

How to earn fat five-figure project deals without working 70 hours a week

Richard Armstrong got his start in the mailroom as a summer college intern. He parlayed that experience into gigs with Prevention, Men's Health, The Smithsonian, National Review, and many other top publications. He's won the "Oscar of Direct Mail" twice, written three books, and has even acted in his own infomercials!

Richard puts a high value on long, leisurely lunches and lots of golf. He also happens to be one of the leading direct mail copywriters in the business, specializing in circulation promotion for magazines and newsletters. And he's one of the most down-to-earth, straight-shooting, and humorous guys you'll ever meet.

In my interview with Richard, he dissected a magalog he did a while back for American Cellars', The Wine Lover's Handbook. We got to sit with Richard in his office as he took us step by step from research to end result, explaining why he did things the way he did. It's easy to see why he commands as much as $25,000 per project and is usually booked six months in advance.

Here are a few takeaways from my interview:

1. Study the masters! Copy winning controls by hand for sure. But dig into them much more than that. Study them. Really study them. Think about why the copywriter did what he did.
2. There's nothing like listening to copywriters talk about their methods. It's an intimate, one-on-one, in-depth conversation. Kind of like being able to grab a superstar at Bootcamp and pick their brain for an hour at the bar.
3. Don't be afraid to do spec pieces, even as your career gets rolling (the magalog project for American Cellars actually started as a "warm" spec. He had an idea for beating the control, and pitched it to the client). As a copywriter, you are paid for your ideas — but only if you use them!
4. Get good at "stealing smart." Richard's lead for the Wine Lover's Handbook actually came from John Caples' classic headline, "They laughed when I sat down at the piano ... " The more you read, study, analyze, and thoroughly understand great pieces of copy, the more you'll be able to weave elements of these into your own unique style.

Why NOW is a perfect time to be starting as a copywriter

One of the final questions I asked Richard was, "If you were entering copywriting today, what would you do?"

Without hesitation, he said, "The Internet. Email. It's a great time to be starting, like back when Sears started his catalog. We're right there now with the internet!"

Richard's niche has always been magalogs and circulation promotion for magazines and newsletters. But these days, he's even branching into infomercials.

Here's the thing: direct response copywriting is never going away. Businesses will always need to sell their products and services. Traditional formats like direct mail will remain, but the Internet opens up a whole "Wild West" environment for enterprising new copywriters. One area that's been popping up a lot in the news lately ...

Getting insider access to pros like Richard is just one of the many benefits available to you as an AWAI member. You get these benefits too:

Our history, connections, and standing in the industry. You'll learn all there is to know about this huge and ever-growing industry ... where a single letter can produce millions of dollars in sales — and reward the copywriter who wrote it very handsomely ... from the men and women who are doing it every day.

You'll learn who all the players in the industry are ... who's looking for writers (practically everyone!) ... who pays top dollar ... and who the best companies to write for are.

The Accelerated Program for Six-Figure Copywriting is based on selling principles that have sold billions of dollars' worth of products and services. It's divided into two categories: "Core" elements every successful letter needs to have, and "Master" secrets you can use to ratchet up the effectiveness of any letter you sit down to write.

But besides cramming the program full of the most powerful copywriting techniques on earth, we also made sure the material was easy to learn and fun to do. Most important, though, we worked extra hard to create a program that anyone with even the most basic writing skills could succeed with.

I asked Circle of Success mentor, and professional writer Pam Foster to share her thoughts on being an AWAI member. Since joining AWAI, Pam has had incredible success in her writing career and she gives full credit to our programs:

"Since I became involved with AWAI in 2005, my life has changed completely for the better in three distinct ways.

1. I learned new writing and marketing skills at a level that most copywriters don't have here in Maine and even across the country. And not only am I a stronger copywriter, I've become a marketing and Web consultant, offering services my clients truly appreciate and value.
2. I've met incredible people who have encouraged me and provided generous guidance along the way: the wonderful staff at AWAI; highly successful writers and mentors including Bob Bly, Paul Hollingshead, and others; and an important circle of fellow copywriters who are eager to keep learning and growing, just like me. They fuel my success!
3. Then there's the money. I finally discovered ways to make a GREAT, independent living and earn much more than I ever imagined. I grossed $120,000 last year, and I'm just starting! I recently landed a fantastic job as a Content Director and Managing Editor, and I still can earn additional income as a freelance writer and eBook publisher on the side.

"My life is much richer literally and figuratively as a member of AWAI!"

See you tomorrow!

In Email Copy Made Easy by Jay Whiten how do I land you as my first client. Next program on my list is web 2.0 by Nick but it seems I can't manage the full payment-no installments involved?

Greetings Katie,

As the 'New Kid on the Block' I am stunned you do not Highlight the Crucible of all professional & personal accomplishment: Research. A thank-you to Sandy Ferguson for birthing the Internet Research Specialist. It is time for AWAI to birth two equally weighted platforms: Research & Writing. Your website AWAI represents the 'Arts side of the Coin'. You must equally present the 'Business side of the Coin' which is Research. AWAI's website presentation is Writing Only. Please invite the 'other side of the Coin' Research into you website format & presentation. Katie, by doing this you will double your community membership.
